How to play

> These answer lists were written for this home game, not collected in a survey. The points are game scores, not the number of people who gave each answer.

1. Choose a host and two teams. The host keeps the answer sheet out of sight and chooses five to eight questions for the game. Give each team a pencil and paper for its running score.
2. Start each round with a face-off: one player from each team hears the same question. First to raise a hand gives a guess. If it is not the top answer, the other player may guess. The answer worth more points wins; equal points go to whoever answered first. If both miss, try the next pair.
3. The face-off winner chooses whether their team will play the question or pass it to the other team. The playing team then guesses one player at a time, working down its line.
4. Cross off each matching answer and add its points to the round total. A repeat or an answer missing from the list is a strike. Keep going until the team finds every answer or reaches three strikes. Accept clear equivalents, such as ‘I'm hungry’ for ‘Feed me.’
5. If the team clears the list, it banks the round total. After three strikes, the other team gets one guess to steal. A match wins the revealed points plus the steal answer's points. If the steal misses, the original team banks only what it revealed.
6. Read a new question and choose new face-off players for the next round. After your chosen questions, the higher running score wins. Use an unused question to settle a tie. The winning team can then try the optional quickfire bonus below.

Give everyone a turn

Read the prompts as written and let the answers do the work. Avoid turning a question about parents, teachers or pets into a joke about someone in the room. Give each player a face-off before anyone repeats, and let a hesitant player volunteer for a later round. The host can accept a phrase that clearly means the same as a listed answer; a funny answer that is not on the list still counts as a miss.

Quickfire bonus

Choose two players from the winning team and send the second out of earshot. The first gets 20 seconds to answer all five questions. Bring the second back and give them 25 seconds for the same questions. If they repeat their partner's answer, ask for another while the clock runs. Score each listed top answer at 30, another sensible answer at 10, and a pass or unrelated answer at 0. Equivalent answers count as repeats. Add both players' points and aim for 200 as a separate bonus challenge; the main game's winner is already decided.

1 · Name a pizza topping.

Answer: Pepperoni

2 · Name something that bounces.

Answer: A ball

3 · Name a noise a car makes.

Answer: Honk or beep

4 · Name something you put on toast.

Answer: Butter

5 · Name something that's green.

Answer: Grass

> Listed top answer: 30. Another sensible nonrepeated answer: 10. Pass, duplicate or unrelated answer: 0. The main game is already decided.
